

The Mom of Many's Guide to Activities

How to Have Fun With the Family on a Low Budget

Teaching the family that there's more to do than what they know.

Tour of Parks

Create a list of all the parks in your city or near surrounding area and travel to each one weekly. At each park, find out the history and share with your family.

Life Budget Board

Get cardboard for each member of the family. Take the family to different places and show them houses, furniture, businesses, etc. Have each member pick out what they want and where they want to work and take a picture of it. Once you're back home, print out the pictures and place them on the vision board and see if their vision matches their salary.

Family Picnic

Nothing says family like a great picnic. Get a nice spread, have the family help you prepare everything giving each person a task, and set everything up as a family. You can even finish up with a nice game of volleyball or kickball.

Classic Balloon Fight/Water Guns

On a nice hot day, balloons and water guns go a long way. Fill up the balloons and water guns and get soaked.

Family Memory Quilting

We all have a favorite blanket, shirt, pair of pants, etc. Have the family gather their memory pieces and sit together for a time of storytelling and family quilting.

Family Talent Show/Karaoke Night

Big families have so much to share when it comes to voices and talents. Set up a family talent show or karaoke night and allow the family to let loose and display their talent.

Family Camping Trip

Nothing makes the family closer like being out in the wild together does. Plan a trip even if its in the back yard and enjoy life together technology free.
